Prince Paris must be devastated by the death of his fiancée. Jacquelyn, Juliet's nurse, has surprised Friar Laurence, the well famous biologist, who was wandering about the room of Juliet. There is the evidence of Jacquelyn: "This morning, it was terrible! I brought the breakfast for Juliet. When I opened the door, I saw Juliet lying on the floor! And a broken bottle near to her head. But, I am almost sure, the priest is implied in her death".

Furthermore, F. Laurence and Juliet were seen talking on the evening of Juliet's. We have interviewed Juliet's mother: "We didn't think that Juliet could commit suicide. With my husband, we feel guilty. I think we were beem to strit with her. On particular, about Romeo. In our mind, it's time we made peace with the Montague family..."
